The modern workplace is rapidly changing. Today, there are many new professions and disciplines that fall outside of the traditional jurisdictions of labor unions. In recent years, labor organizations have started to venture into these new realms of employment. Examples include recent organizing campaigns involving graduate students and post-doctorates at Harvard University, and the formation of the Independent Driver's Guild which negotiates conditions with Uber for ride-share drivers in New York City. Please describe what field or occupation you are interested in pursuing after college. Identify the major workplace issues and priorities held by employees in your field or desired profession, and what a labor union might do to resolve or improve upon these conditions.

If you are undecided, please use any emergent or underrepresented workforce in the modern economy that interests you for the purpose of answering the question.

Entries must be received by Friday, July 13, 2018 addressed to the Scholarship Committee at the Union office at the above address.

The Scholarship Committee consists of:

Michael Gormley
Kevin Warner
Patrick Daly

By serving on the committee, these members shall be ineligible to have their children or grandchildren considered for an award. The Committee shall announce the names of the recipients in August.
